Livingston and Moffett In New International Partnership

For Immediate Release

July 14, 2003

Washington, DC –Former US House members Bob Livingston, a Louisiana Republican and former House Appropriations Chairman and Speaker-Designate and Toby Moffett, a Connecticut Democrat and former Chairman of the House Subcommittee on Environment, Energy and Natural Resources, have begun a new chapter in their three year partnership -- the creation of the Livingston-Moffett International Group Practice.

The new organization is a division of The Livingston Group, a four-year old entity created by Livingston and three former staff members when he left Congress four years ago. The Livingston Group has restructured its operations, grown in its reach and expertise and formed additional practice areas in Energy and Natural Resources, Agriculture, Defense/Homeland Security, Education and Non-Profits, Health Care and Pharmaceuticals, Science and Technology and Transportation, Shipping and Shipbuilding.

Moffett will head the new practice focusing on representing foreign governments and, increasingly, non-U.S. companies. According to Moffett, “We are attracting and pursuing foreign companies with no previous Washington representation and a need to interact with the US government and US companies in their sectors.”

“We enjoy working together, said Bob Livingston, “and respect each other’s views, which in this business adds depth to our client representation. We share a dedication to provide the best advice and advocacy for our clients.”

The LMG Practice has established affiliates in several regions throughout the world who have successfully serviced clients and assisted with business development, particularly in the United Kingdom and in Eastern and Central Europe. Livingston and Moffett are working together on a number of clients in the international arena, including Caithness Energy, De La Rue - a British firm; the governments of Morocco, Turkey and the Cayman Islands; and AFTECH - a non-profit Africa distance learning and work force development project.

Recognized as one of the fastest growing government relations firms in Washington, DC, the Livingston Group, LLC (TLG) was created in March 1999 and provides comprehensive public affairs, government relations and lobbying services on a national and international basis.
